Bloom Café

A warm, editorial website and packaging for a neighbourhood café.

CHALLENGE

Neighbourhood cafés lose orders to apps because their own sites are slow to read, hard to order from and look nothing like the shop.

SOLUTION

A one-screen story with a single action, order for pickup, backed by real food photography, a warm serif voice and a menu that scans in seconds on a phone. The same identity runs onto cups and bags.

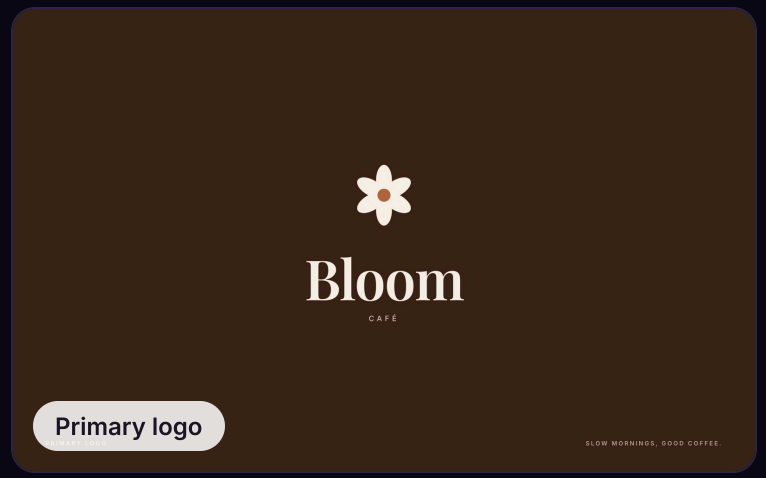

KEY DECISIONS

- One action above the fold
- Warmth through shape
- Packaging as part of the site

Northwind Studio

A quiet, image-led website for an architecture and interiors studio.

CHALLENGE

Architecture sites often bury the work under heavy menus and long text, so visitors never feel the buildings.

SOLUTION

A near-silent interface that gets out of the way: a full-bleed hero, a clean project grid and a project page that puts facts in a quiet table so the images lead.

KEY DECISIONS

- Let the photography lead
- An editorial serif
- Facts, not paragraphs

Halo Skincare

A calm, minimalist identity, website and packaging for a luxury skincare line.

CHALLENGE

Luxury skincare is crowded with loud claims. A new label earns trust by looking calm, precise and unhurried.

SOLUTION

A quiet system: a single wide-set wordmark, ink-on-bone typography, matte porcelain packaging with brushed-metal caps, and a website where the product has the whole screen.

KEY DECISIONS

- Say less
- Materials do the talking
- Space as a feature

Orbit Fitness

A high-energy website and app screen for a 30-day fitness challenge.

CHALLENGE

Fitness brands need to create momentum fast. People decide in seconds whether to join and keep going.

SOLUTION

A dark interface with one electric accent, huge condensed headlines, a real-member spotlight and a class schedule you can book in one tap. The app turns progress into a streak ring.

KEY DECISIONS

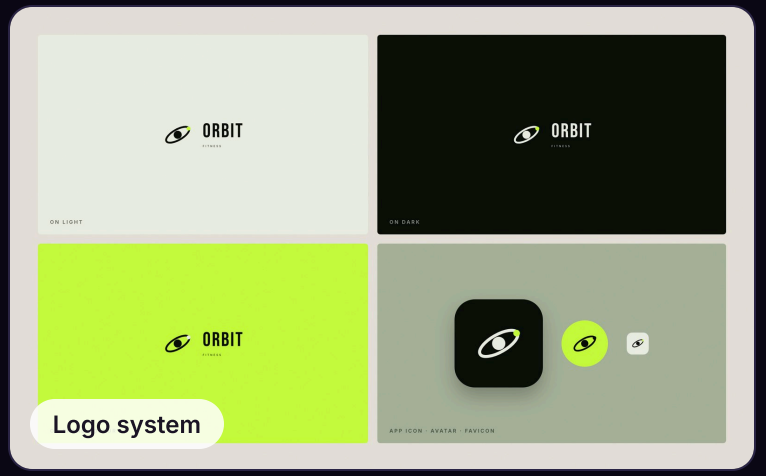

- One loud colour
- Real people, real effort
- Progress you can see

WEBSITE · MUSIC · CONCEPT

Pulse Records

A bold website and music player for an independent record label.

CHALLENGE

An independent label needs a home that sounds like its music: loud, a little strange and built for listening, not reading.

SOLUTION

A colour-graded turntable hero under a huge gradient wordmark, release cards with their own artwork and a persistent player so the music never stops while visitors browse.

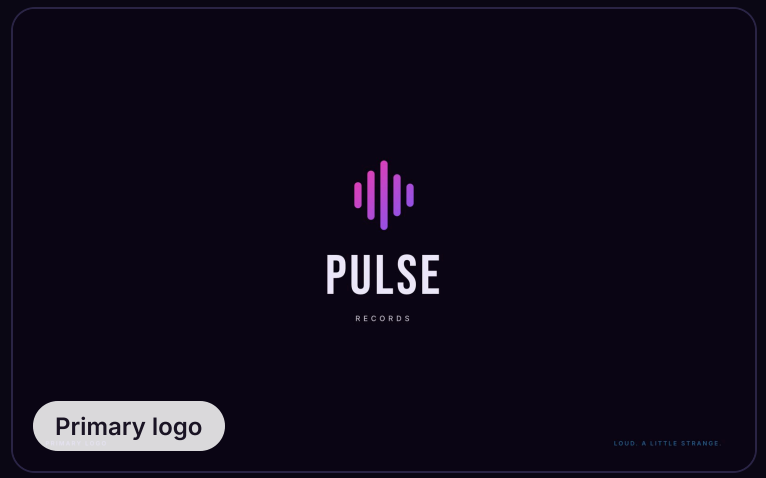

KEY DECISIONS

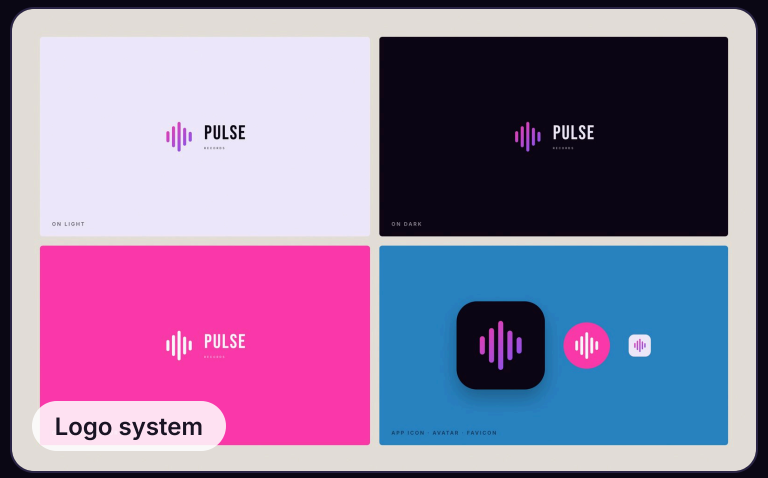

- Make the type the poster
- Artwork first
- A player that stays

WEBSITE · SOCIAL · CONCEPT

Summit Co.

An outdoor-gear storefront and social posts built around the trail.

CHALLENGE

Outdoor gear sells the adventure first. A shop that feels like a catalogue loses the feeling that makes people buy.

SOLUTION

A hero that puts the product in its natural setting, a tidy new-arrivals row and a social template that reuses the same photography and ember-orange accent.

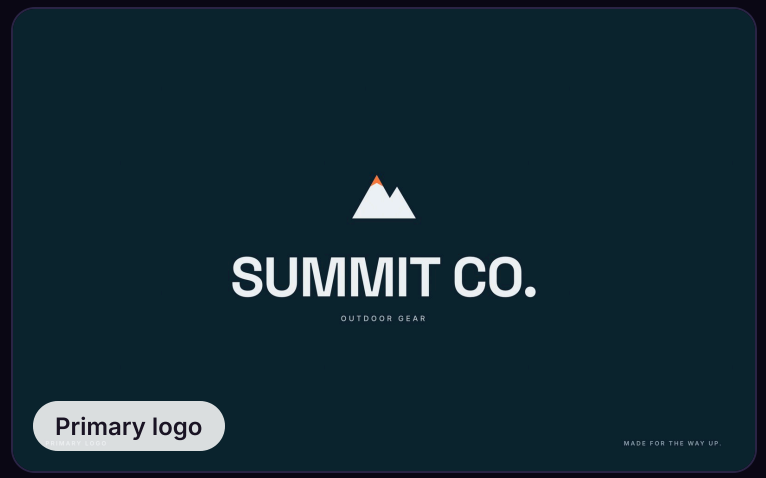

KEY DECISIONS

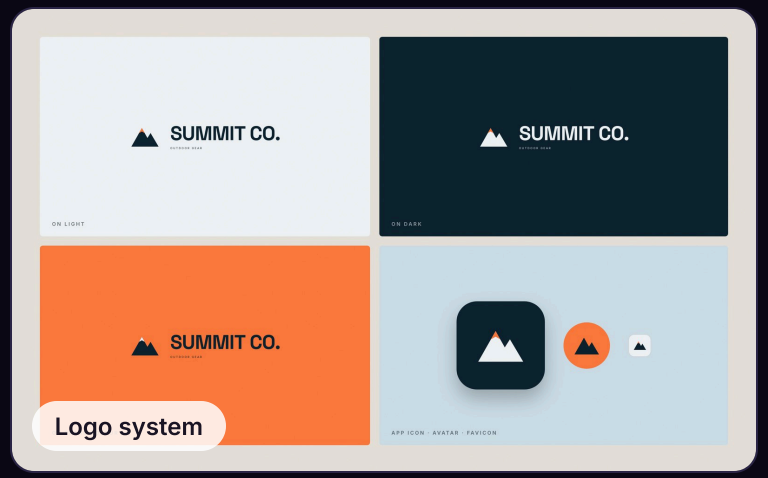

- Product in its habitat
- One accent, used sparingly
- Social that matches the shop
